Your Comments:

Mr. Harrison,

I am a long time Texas resident and practiced medicine in my hometown of Austin, including owning a minor emergency center, dba Mopac Medical Care. In late 2001 I wrote an article critical of the psychiatric profession for missing sleep disorders, such as obstructive sleep apnea, and placing patients on psychiatric drugs inappropriately. This was mailed to MHMR clients as part of a peer support group publication. The medical board went after my license and attempted to restrict my right to send patients for sleep studies. Misdiagnosis of patients with actual disorders as psychiatric causes a lot of tax payer funded medical costs. This is an example of corporate influence into our government and individual lives that cannot be controlled by when physicians do not have freedom of speech.

I finally decided to sue the Texas Medical Board in Federal court, a tactic my original attorney would not recommend. I was then stalked out of Texas and have not been willing to return until now.

Do you know any groups that would be interested in networking with me? You may give them my name also.
